MacINTOSH FAILS IN ATTEMPT TO SPAN ATLANTIC

British Flier Is Forced To Turn Back by Adverse
Elements

LANDED AT 7.30 P. M.

Plane Was Bucking Terrific Gales Each Time It Was Sighted

DUBLIN, Sept. 17 (I.N.S.)—The
sixth attempt this year to span the Atlantic Ocean by air from east to west has met with failure.

Captain Robert H. MacIntosh, of the British Royal Air Force, who started from here yesterday afternoon for New York in the monoplane Princess Xenia, was forced to turn back last night when a forty-mile an hour headwind made progress across the ocean impossible. He brought his plane safely to earth at 7.30 p. m. at Beale
Strand, near Balinobun, County Kerry, Ireland, after deciding that further attempts to brave adverse weather conditions would be little less than suicide.

Captain MacIntosh, accompanied by Commandant James C. Fitzmaurice of the Irish Free State Air Force, hopped off from Dublin at 1.36, Irish time, Friday afternoon, in spite of the warning of weather forecasters, who predicted they would encounter unfavorable winds and storms over the Atlantic. The Princess Xenia was sighted at three points on the Irish coast, and on each occasion the plane was bucking terrific winds and squally
weather.

In explaining his decision to turn back, Captain MacIntosh stated that the Princess Xenia had been between two and three hours at sea when very heavy weather was encountered. The visibility, the flier stated, was very poor, and at times it was necessary to fly as low as thirty feet above the water.

ST. ANN'S WILL OPEN FOOTBALL SEASON HERE

Contest To Be Staged at 2.30
Tomorrow with Lawndale
Eleven

EXPECT STIFF BATTLE

St. Ann's football team will open the season here tomorrow with Cornell A. A. of Lawndale as their opponents.

The St. Ann's team has been rigorously trained under Coach Dougherty for the past few weeks, and after the final work-out last night, Dougherty was well satisfied with the fine way in which the boys went about their various formations and expressed his confidence in their victory tomorrow.

The field has been laid and marked out in regulation fashion and is a credit to those who have worked so hard to make it as fine a playing field
as any in this vicinity.

The Cornell A. A. is composed of some of the best players in and around Frankford and Lawndale, and expect to give "The Saints" a hard battle.
The contest is scheduled to start at 2.30 and should prove to be an exciting and evenly matched battle. A large crowd is expected to witness the kickoff as both teams have a large following of fans.

St. Ann's will line-up as follows:
S. Pope, left end; P. Straffe, left tackle; B. Prall, left guard; A. Mis-sara, center; D. Greco, right guard;
T. Billie, right tackle; N. Gilardi, right end; A. Pio, right half-back; F. Pa-letta, left half-back; A. Sabatini, quarterback; S. Seneca, fullback.

State News

LOCK HAVEN, Pa., Sept. 17 (I.N.S.)— Pennsylvania's far famed hit-and-run motorists are turning their attention to trans now.

An unidentified motorist caused considerable excitement at McElhattan,
six miles from here, when his machine plunged into the locomotive of the Easton Express, breaking a piston rod on the engine.

Clouds of steam enveloped the train,
causing near panic to several persons.
The motorist escaped in the "smoke screen" thus thrown down for him.

During the excitement Ira Lucas, conductor, leaped from the train to learn what the trouble was, and was hurt when he caught his foot in the ties.

ANNVILLE, Pa., Sept. 17.—Lebanon Valley College's football schedule for the coming season reveals that only one game will be played on the home
gridiron this year.

Penn State, Fordham and Brown
are headlines against the Valley School. The schedule includes:

Sept. 24, Penn State at State College; Oct. 1, Fordham at New York;
Oct. 8, Villanova at Villanova; Oct.
15, Muhlenberg at Allentown; Oct. 22,
Brown at Providence; Oct. 29, Mt. St.
Mary's at Emmetsburg; Nov. 5, Schuylkill at Reading; Nov. 19, Albright at Lebanon.

Field Club To Play Picked Twilight Nine

The Bristol Field Club will play
an all-star team picked from the Twilight League this afternoon on Lee-dom's Field and they will no doubt have to hustle to win.

The team will be composed of Mc-Carthy, of Keystone; D. McDermitt, of the "Caseys;" Leyden, of the "Hibs;" David, of Keystone; E. Roe, of Keystone; W. McGerr, of last season's champion, Third Ward; P. Barrett, of the "Caseys;" Di Risi, of St. Ann's; R.
Barton and M. Riola, of Leedom's.
John Mulholland has assembled the team together. "Russ" Barton will be field captain. Play will start at 3 o'clock.

Tullytown

Mr. James A. Cooper, of Main street, recently had as guests, Mrs. James L.
Fabian, Miss Bessie Search, Miss Elizabeth Connors, and Mr. and Mrs. Jack Munluephy, of Philadelphia, and Mr.
and Mrs. A. Martin Percy, of Collingswood, N. J.

The William Penn Mutual Building
and Loan Association closed its thirty-fourth series of new shares with over seven hundred new shares.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul E. White, and family, of Oxford avenue, were visitors at the home of Mrs. White's parents, Mr. and Mrs. David Gilliland, of Pennsylvania Park, Sunday.

Rev. Earl Crisswell has been visiting at the home of Mrs. Phoebe Morgan, of Main street.

Miss Jean Newlin, of Harrisburg, has been spending some time at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Watson, of Oxford avenue.

A meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Tullytown Christian Church was held at the home of Mrs. Carrie Snook, of Fallsington avenue on

was a Wednesday visitor of her sister, Mrs. Foster Bates, of Holmesburg.

The Misses Swain, of 619 Radcliffe street, entertained at dinner and cards
at their home on Thursday evening.

Wholesale Evasion

(EDITORIAL)

THOSE who read yesterday's issue of the Bucks County
Independent and who are capable of doing their own thinking, must have found therein a complete index to the sort of campaign that the so-called Independents have been conducting during the last few months—ostensibly, but only ostensibly, with the fire defense question as the "over-shadowing issue" of the contest.

The Bucks County Independent stretched itself. It employed the largest type it could find to say all the anonymous things it could think of; and thereby it succeeded in being very typical of the whole Independent campaign, with its utter lack of any substantial facts with which to bolster irresponsible and utterly unwarranted statements.

For example, there was a story about the eloquent and soul-stirring speeches that had been made by Smoyer, et al., at an open-air meeting the preceding evening. But significantly enough—and as always—the Independent refrained from quoting a single line from the addresses of any one of the speakers.

Why is it that throughout this campaign the Bucks County
Independent has not put into black and white a single definitive statement made by any Independent candidate or their supporters? Doesn't the fact itself give its own answer? It is obvious and needs no elaboration. It is because those statements have in most instances been so wide of the truth that none connected with the Independent movement want them made matters of record, where they could be subjected to scrutiny and exposed for their misrepresentation.

Also, and again entirely typical, there was the cowardly and wholly unfounded story which always appears in the Bucks County Independent at just about this stage of a campaign—the story that certain workers, whose names, of course, are never given, are being threatened with the loss of their jobs
if they do not vote for the regular Republican nominees.

Never a campaign goes by without a last-hour resort to that threadbare and worn-out libel, which never had any warrant or reason, and is utterly without justification today.

There was the usual "letter to the editor," which, of course, is very, very old stuff; and there was the "sate" with its conclusive evidence of the intended treachery to two tried and experienced members of the School Board; and an editorial called "Recapitulation," which was in fact a recapitulation of all the distortions and mis-statements that the Independent and its orators have made throughout this campaign.

But not a word in explanation of why, if the fire defense question was in fact the real reason for the Independent campaign, Raymond A. Nevegold, Assistant Chief of the existing fire defense system, did not run for Borough Council instead of for the only paying job on the ticket in the Sixth Ward—a job which has nothing whatever to do with the fire defense question.

Not a word in explanation of why James V. Dougherty deserted the Independent ticket in the Sixth Ward when he had sensed the Nevegold purpose, and refused to be a candidate for Council under such auspices.

Not a word in explanation of why, if the fire defense question was in fact the "over-shadowing issue," the Independents put up candidates for assessor against the present incumbents, Arthur Wright, the present incumbent and a volunteer fireman in good and regular standing, in the First Ward; and against James L. McGee, a captain of the fire police, in the Second Ward.

Not a word about the imaginary "tax increase" which they are using in a word-of-mouth campaign which they know to be utterly false and without the slightest justification.

Not a word in rebuttal of the overwhelming indictment and repudiation by Chief Burgess Anderson, backed by his integrity as Chief Burgess, his reputation as a citizen, and his standing as a business man.

Not a word in attempted denial or explanation of the Burgess' emphatic statement that the entire fire defense controversy was precipitated by the demands of the five existing fire companies, which would have doubled the present fire defense annual expenditure.

Not a word with respect to the Fire Committee's detailed report of last Fall, which clearly showed every aspect of the long investigation, and the incontrovertible reasons for the course which Borough Council, by overwhelming majority, adopted.

Not a word, in fact, about any of the real questions relating to the present campaign. Just assertion, declamation, anonymous accusation, and misrepresentation multiplied and repeated again and again.

Are the Republican voters of Bristol to be influenced by such a campaign of evasion and untruth? We do not think so.
Their answer should be given on Tuesday next, in the overwhelming nomination of every regular Republican candidate.

BEAVER STREET RUNWAY OPENED OVER NEW BRIDGE

Fill Not Quite Completed For
The Canal Street
Entrance

A GREAT IMPROVEMENT

The Beaver street runway over the new bridge spanning the canal at Beaver street was opened to vehicular traffic this morning, according to an announcement made by the Street
Committee and the Borough Engineer.

It was stated that Canal street approach is not quite finished and that for a few days yet, traffic via Canal street will be closed.

Pedestrians have been using the bridge for quite some time.

The work is nearing completion.
There are a few minor things yet to be done such as the placing of light standards, etc.

The roadway has been rolled and the Beaver street approach is a fine wide thoroughfare.

The bridge makes an excellent appearance and its graceful lines are very pleasing to the eye. The grade is an easy one.

SOUTH LANGHORNE

When crossing the Lincoln Highway on Sunday about 9.30 at the corner of Bellevue avenue, while on his way to the railroad station, an elderly man was run down by an auto bearing a Maryland license. When struck, he was lodged between the hood and a fender, which saved him from a worse injury had he been thrown to the concrete highway. He was rushed to the office of Dr. Lovett, in Langhorne.

Miss Kathryn Devlin spent Sunday at the home of Mrs. Eugene Fisher, in Frankford.

Mr. and Mrs. Coleman Kenderdine and daughter spent Sunday with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Wessaw.

Mr. William J. Eckhardt, of Philadelphia, spent the week-end at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Tillie.

Fire destroyed the barn at the home of Mr. Monroe, in Langhorne Manor, Tuesday afternoon. Four local fire companies responded. The fire started about 1.15 p. m. on the second story of the barn and garage combined, the whole upper part of the building being destroyed. The fire raged for fully an hour before it was extinguished.

A man hiking on the Lincoln Highway, whose name was Niblick, was struck by a hit-run driver. Mr. Nib-lick received a compound fracture of the skull.

—Paul Berrer, of Washington, D. C., has returned to his home following a several weeks' visit to his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Carroll, of 929 Garden street.

LATE NEWS

SON IS BORN

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Barton, of 243 Madison street, are rejoicing over the birth of a son yesterday at the private hospital of Dr. J. Fred Wagner. The little fellow has been named Robert Monroe. Mother and son are doing nicely.

BURIED HERE

The body of John Regis Callahan, son of the late Charles Callahan, was interred in St. Mark's Cemetery, here, yesterday afternoon. The boy, who was but 12 years of age, died in Atlantic City, after an illness caused by diphtheria.

IN HOSPITAL

Mrs. Annie Nalenti, of 217 Dorrance street, is under treatment at the Harrison Hospital.

(Special to Courier)

DOYLESTOWN, Sept. 17.—The first week of criminal court for the September term ended yesterday, with adjournment until Monday morning
when seven Philadelphians, charged with carrying concealed deadly weapons following a parade of the Ku Klux Klan in Bristol on Labor Day, will be tried.

The last case for trial yesterday resulted in the conviction of William L.
Cubberly, of Fallsington, owner of the Farmers' Hay and Grain Market at 296 North Willow street, Trenton, N.
J., charged with the manufacture and possession of intoxicating liquor on the farm where he lives in Falls township.

Cubberly was tried before Judge William C. Ryan and was fined $500 and costs and sentenced to three months in the Bucks County Prison.
The jury deliberated but ten minutes
and returned the verdict.

The defense was that the place was sub-rented by Cubberly's wife to a foreigner by the first name of "Frank"
for a spaghetti factory. The Cubberly house is on a large tract. The main house known as the mansion house,
is divided into two parts and Cubberly lived in one side with his wife and three children. On the other side, the police found a large moonshine plant.
There is a tenant house near the mansion house.

Cubberly rented the place, where he has lived for five years, from Edgar T. Snipes, of Morrisville, and a Mrs. Tatum, and his wife then sub-rented the one section of the house to the unknown "Frank," a foreigner.

Otto A. Maske, a State Penitentiary guard, who was formerly corporal of the State Police stationed in Doylestown, was called as the first Commonwealth witness. He said that altogether with Troopers Bankert and Simmons, he raided the place on July 20. Cubberly answered the door at 2 o'clock in the morning.

In the cellar of the mansion house,
on the uncupied side, the officer said
he found two vats made of concrete and each containing 50,000 gallons of mash made of yeast, water and corn sugar. The mash was in the process of fermentation. Leading from the cellar to the tenant house were pipes.

In the tenant house was found a 400-gallon still that reached from the ground floor to a distance somewhat above the second story of the house.
There was a redistilling stove found in the tenant house and thirty gallons of alcohol. In the mansion house, the floor was cut away in two rooms downstairs so that the mash could be stirred in the monster vats below.

Under cross examination conducted by Howard I. James, of Bristol, attorney for the defendant, Corporal Maske said that on the night of the raid, upon arrival, Cubberly said to him "how much would it take to fix this up and stop the case." The officer said that Cubberly did say something to him about his wife renting the place
to several men for a spaghetti factory.

Troopers Simons and Bankert corroborated the Corporal's testimony.

In defense, Cubberly said that he was away from home at long periods, that he went to Canada at times to purchase straw for Trenton potteries,
and that his wife attended to the sub-renting of the house.

"Who rented the half of the mansion house you do not occupy?" asked District Attorney Eastburn. "Well, my wife rented it. I do not know the

THE CONSTITUTION

Every school boy knows why we have a holiday on the Fourth of July, but few people have ever been aware of anything unusual happening on the seventeenth of September. Yet that which happened on the seventeenth of September made secure that which happened on the fourth of July, and had it not been for the seventeenth of September it is very likely that we would not be celebrating the fourth of July.

It was on the fourth day of July, 1776, that the Declaration of Independence was signed, declaring the American colonies free and independent. But it is one thing to proclaim a new nation, and it is an entirely different thing to thoroughly establish a new nation and carry it through its early stages to success so that it will stand firmly before the world as a power in international relations.

Anyone who has read history knows how loosely the American states, as they were called after the Declaration of Independence, were first held together. It was plain to thinking men of the time that the Articles of Confederation that were first adopted, would never do. The states, in those days, were more separated from each other than are the nations of the earth today. Many of them had little in common. Each one was inclined to think itself sufficient unto itself; there were jealousies and rivalries that caused frequent ruptures in their friendly relations.

After the close of the Revolution American currency had sunk almost to zero. The credit of the new nation was nil; there was no central power with authority to do anything, and it was apparent that unless something was done quickly to establish a centralized government and knit the thirteen states into a solid nation the Revolutionary war would have been fought in vain, and the Declaration of Independence would become a mere scrap of paper.

It was then that the leaders in the different states got together and issued a call for a convention. The original intention was to try to make the Articles of Confederation more workable, but the outcome was the present constitution which was finally adopted September 17, 1787, just 140 years ago today. It established a real, centralized government with power, and marked the actual beginning of this nation although nearly twelve years had passed since the signing of the Declaration of Independence.

We, then, who have had this priceless heritage handed down to us do well to observe this day, the anniversary of the adoption of the constitution. That document is the very foundation of a government under which our lives and our property are safe, and where there is equal opportunity for all.

Books on bees are barred in Russia. This is unfortunate in Russia, where nearly everybody has one.

Everything has been explained now in connection with the world war with the exception of who won it.

The early bird gets the publicity. We read a good deal about the first robin, but nothing about the last one.

As we understand it, an experienced traveler is one who knows how to be disagreeable enough to get served.

HOUSES

that can be made into HOMES

Two-story brick residences containing six rooms and bath. All newly papered and painted throughout. Conveniences which are to be found in any modern house today—electricity, gas, hot air heater, water. Front porches of ample size and large bay-windows on second floor. A rear yard just big enough to be kept neat and attractive. With the touch of a housewife these dwellings can be made into real homes of comfort. Rents are very moderate. Location is good.

"IRISH HEARTS," with May McAvoy, is a Warner Bros. picturization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS

Shella Kildare and her father emigrate to America, following Emmett Murtough, to whom she is betrothed. Neither Kildare nor Murtough will hold steady jobs and Shella goes to work as a waitress. She makes friends with the family of Rory O'Shea, a professional boxer. Murtough renews his engagement to Shella, although he has revealed plans of his bootlegging gang to remove $150,000 worth of contraband to a cabaret girl in the employ of a rival band.

She divined the mysterious "Gus" was undoubtedly connected with a liquor ring, but five thousand dollars was five thousand dollars! And she thought of her mind. "Why share it with Murtough at all?" Life as she had learned it was just one "double cross" after another. Why not leave him out of it entirely? Why make him a party to the deal at all? Of course, if Gus insisted, she would do so and then scheme to get the money in her own possession. He was not a bad fellow and she liked him because he never "got frosh." She could take care of herself with men like Murtough. It was those slick, smart fellows that got girls into trouble: not men like Murtough, who seemed to be afraid of his shrewd little companion. He was a clumsy, ignorant fellow, easy to fend away and easy to keep at his distance.

From the moment the doors were ready for admission at the Castle, Clarice nervously watched for the entrance of Gus. As the hours passed she feared that he would not come and she began to worry lest she had been "kidded" by the three men in evening dress. She was seated at a table with a party when the manager summoned her. Offering her excuses she left the ballroom and went downstairs.

"They're going to unload a shipful of stuff at that station."

"There's a big John in there waiting for you," the manager said, pointing to the lounge room. Clarice thanked him and entered, in a corner at a table for two sat "Gus."

"You're on the job after all, aren't you?" she asked as he waived her to the chair opposite him. "I thought maybe your interest in truck drivers had passed."

"No; still looking for a good driver, honest, reliable and willing to learn," he remarked with a smile. "That description fit your candidate?"

"To a T."

The waiter approached and took the order.

"Now, what did you learn; give me the whole story," he asked.

"First, who are you?" demanded Clarice.

"Do you have to know?"

"Why should I do business with a blind? You want something I've got, and it's something worth while, take it from me."

"All right, I'll lay at least four cards of my straight on the table. Fair enough? My name is Gus Schermer, you can get me any afternoon at three sharp at this telephone number. I'm always at the wire."

"What's your business?"

"Everything. But right now I'm particularly interested in this," he lifted his glass to his lips.

"What if I called that number now and asked for you?"

Schermer looked at her speculatively for a moment.

"Want proof?"

"Mister, I born just around the block from Ninth Avenue. Get me?"

"Go ahead. Here is the answer you'll get, 'Call Mr. Schermer at three o'clock tomorrow afternoon.' Will that satisfy you?"

Clarice nodded and taking the nickel he proffered went to the telephone booth in the reception hall. "I want to speak to Mr. Schermer."

mer," she announced when the connection had been made. "Call Mr. Schermer at three o'clock tomorrow afternoon," came the reply. Clarice started to speak, but the click of the receiver being hung up silenced her. She hurried back to the table in the lounge.

"That's okay for me," she said. "Now what do you want to know?"

"What have you got to tell?"

"You better ask me. When you've found out enough for the price you named, you'll stop, and I won't feel like a bargain sale."

"Smart girl. All right. Who's your truck driver friend?"

"Emmett Murtough, only been in this country a little while."

"Who's his boss?"

"Mannie Clocker."

"How did he get in with Clocker? Clocker don't pick up with strangers."

"Emmett has been a member of the West End Club almost ever since he arrived from Ireland. He met Clocker there."

"Does Murtough know Clocker's business?"

"I'll say so! And how!"

"For instance."

"Well, first he was a guard, then he learned to drive a truck. He was driving one night when a gang of hijackers held them up, and Emmett got a bullet in his shoulder. Soon as he learns more about the game he'll drive a pilot car."

"Does he know many of Clocker's hide-outs?"

"I don't know; he never mentioned but one to me, that's the one on Long Island."

"He knows where that is?"

"Sure, it was on one of those trips that he got his."

Schermer was silent for a few minutes and Clarice waited patiently for more questions. Wise in her ways, she did not want to offer more information, if that which she had given was sufficient.

"Now what about him? How loyal is he?"

"I think he's on the level, but money talks, and right now little Clarice can handle him. But do you need him at all? Suppose I can tell you something that would be worth while, couldn't you leave him out?"

"That depends on how much you know. But what do you want to double cross your sweetie for? Thought this money was to be a wedding gift."

"I am not saying it isn't, but, maybe, I don't want him to get mixed up in this at all."

Schermer hesitated. Already his ring knew of the ship that lay outside the twelve mile limit waiting to be unloaded, but they did not know the location of the secret landing station. They needed someone who knew every foot of it to help arrange the plane for a concentrated attack and the theft of the entire cargo. If this girl knew the place, then scouts might be able to lay out the campaign, but a deserter from the Clocker camp would be of invaluable aid.

"Do you know where Clocker's place is in Long Island?"

"Not exactly," confessed Clarice and she mentally kicked herself for not having wormed that from Murtough.

"What else do you know?"

"I know this," Clarice leaned across the table and whispered. "They're going to unload a shipful of stuff at that station on Friday and Saturday nights."

"This week?"

"Why, I thought—" Schermer let surprise creep into his voice.

"Maybe that info isn't worth something," boasted the girl. Schermer looked at his watch. It was near to four o'clock.

"Can you get this bird on the phone?"

"No, he lives in a rooming house down on Fifty-second Street. There is no phone."

"Will he come if you send for him?"

"Here?"

"No, at an address I'll give you."

"Yes."

"All right. Write him a note now. Tell him to go to Room 717, Marmaduke Hotel, as quick as he can. Tell him it's something big for him."

The waiter brought writing paper and a Clarice wrote as Schermer dictated:

Dear Emmett:

Go at once to Room 717, Marmaduke Hotel in Twenty-seventh Street and ask for Mr. Schermer. It means a lot for you. Do what he tells you.

CLARICE.

"Here, I'll take that and have my driver go up and give it to him on the way down."

Schermer paid the check and hurried out. Twenty minutes later Murtough was awakened by the chauffeur.

"A guy tells me to give you this and for you to hurry," the driver said.

"But, who gave it to you?"

"How do I know? It's the guy I'm driving."

LEGAL

NOTICE

Croydon, Pa.,
Sept. 15, 1927.
The Bristol Courier, Gentlemen:

It has come to my notice this week, that one person at Croydon has openly made certain accusations regarding my character and conduct, all of which statements are untrue and slanderous. I take the liberty in writing this open letter calling upon any person who has accused me of misconduct of any kind to come forward and prove the same or to make a public retraction of all such statements through the medium of your paper.

Unless this is done I shall take all necessary steps to require proof of the unfair and slanderous statements so made.

I am sending this letter to the Bristol Courier and the Bucks County Independent and request that these papers shall publish the same in their paper. I am a candidate for the office of Constable in Bristol Township and wish to be fair and just to all other candidates for any office within the Township, but my own candidacy is seriously affected, and work and assistance I might be able to give to other candidates is handicapped by the malicious and unwarranted allegations of a few people who are absolutely unable to prove or maintain one of their statements.

Yours truly,

H. RAYMOND SATTLER.

"I had no idea of the still being in the tenant house or the vats in the cellar until about ten days before the raid when I saw certain men in and about the place and became suspicious," continued Cumberly.

"I saw the men come late at night and they were annoying to us. When I realized they were doing something wrong I ordered them out and my wife gave the rent back to them."

"I had nothing to do with the still, and received no income from it or had anything to do with making the stuff. When Trooper Maske came to the place the early morning of the raid, he asked me how much rent we got for the place and I told him $25. Trooper Simons then said, 'you are a fool to let them get away with you that way, why this place is worth $250 a month.' Maske then said that he knew who was running the still and said a couple of men in Trenton were the operators. He then told me that if the men were picked out on the streets of Trenton, and he knew them, he said, that it might be possible to get $2000 out of them."

Called in rebuttal, Corporal Maske flatly denied all such conversation and Trooper Simons did likewise. Under cross-examination, Cumberly told District Attorney Eastburn that before purchasing the Farmers' Hay and Grain Market in Trenton, he was a guard at the Tullytown Arsenal, and also worked in Alabama for a time.

Cumberly admitted to the District Attorney that he saw the vats at the place being made about four months ago, but that it was not until ten days before the raid that his wife told him they were for the purpose of making spaghetti.

"There was some odor connected with the contents of the vats," testified Cumberly, "but the odor was not of whiskey, it was a sort of sweet odor." Mrs. Ruth Edna Cumberly, wife of the defendant, said on the witness stand that she was suspicious about ten days before the raid and that she gave the rent money back to the "Frank," whom she did not know by his last name.

Edgar T. Snipes, of Morrisville, a member of the Bucks County Bar, said that his wife and Mrs. Tatum rented the place to Cumberly about five years ago. He also said that Cumberly bore a good reputation.

Charles W. Mainard, of Falls township, a farmer, and Frank Knock, of 195 North Willow street, Trenton, a piano salesman, both were character witnesses for Cumberly.

In pronouncing sentence Judge Ryan said: "The jury believed you to be guilty and the Court has no quarrel to make with the verdict. It is strange that men like you engage in the nefarious business of making illicit whiskey."

After deliberating six hours, a jury before adjournment yesterday afternoon in Court No. 1 before Judge Ryan acquitted Filippo Mazzillo and his wife, Luciano Mazzillo, of Bristol, of a charge of keeping a disorderly house but directed that the defendants pay the costs. The case was tried on Thursday and Judge Ryan charged the jury the first thing yesterday morning.

Thirty days in prison and a fine of $10 was the sentence imposed upon Paul Kulschar, of Springfield township, who was found guilty of striking a neighbor, Steve Kovitch. Judge Shull imposed sentence. In the same court, earlier in the day, Kulschar was acquitted of a charge of malicious mischief brought by another neighbor, Alex Legat, but he was directed to pay the costs. Legat claimed that Kulschar polluted a stream that ran over his property by allowing pigs to waste in it.

Samuel H. Brown, proprietor of a gasoline station and restaurant opposite the Philadelphia Motor Speedway on the Lincoln Highway near South Langhorne, was found guilty before

BILLY'S UNCLE

Judge Ryan yesterday morning of a charge of driving his automobile in Hulmeville on July 16 while drunk. He was sentenced to pay a fine of $200 and serve three months in the Bucks County Prison.

Brown said that he got the liquor in Trenton. He admitted that he was drunk and that his car was wrecked in Hulmeville, but denied that he drove the car at any time. He said that a man by the name of George Jeanette, of South Langhorne, drove the car. Jeanette did not appear in court as a witness and District Attorney Eastburn asked the defendant if he tried to get him to come. Brown said that he did not think that it was necessary.
